Editor's Window

Colonel Allen Griffin, who publishes the Monterey Peninsula Herald, wants the State Supreme Court to compel the redistricting of the county's five supervisorial districts to make them as nearly equal as practicable in population. He says that the voters are being invidiously discriminated against.

Since Colonel Griffin in his petition says that he is acting on behalf of all of the voters of Monterey County — and I'm one of them—I decided to take a look at his proposition.

He has made out a good case for his allegation that there is not nearly an equal number of people in each district. The Fourth District has 938 registered voters and our Fifth District has 34,059; the others are ranged in between. That is a curious, but so far not very telling, arithmetical novelty.

Since each of these districts has only one supervisor, I first concluded that his annoyance lay not with the numerical disparity (which didn't get me at all upset when I thought about it for a while) but because the one supervisor in the First District was representing fewer people than the one supervisor in the Fifth District, but even this had no emotional impact on me. It was as if Colonel Griffin were troubled because this newspaper had fewer subscribers than his does,—which seems all right with me, even as I now think about it.

So, I had to abandon that speculation and go on searching. Finally, I thought I had found it.

He gave me the clue in his petition. He said that a violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution was involved. That was too unequivocal to ignore, so I looked at the Fourteenth. Sure enough, it says that "Representatives shall be apportioned among the several states according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed."

I must admit, I was slow to get the point. For quite a while I wandered around, following congressmen from state to state and untaxed Indians all over the reservation. But finally I emerged into the light of day in Sacramento, where the State Supreme Court sits, and it was there that I winnowed out the purpose of Colonel Griffin's prayer. He thinks that what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander, and his attorneys are righteously waving in the face of the judges something called Baker vs. Carr to prove it.

The judges, who are a lot more able than I to draw an analogy between congressmen in Tennessee and supervisors in Monterey County, may—or they may not—grant the Colonel's petition, providing they are not, in the meanwhile, axed by some renegade untaxed Indian.

I appreciate the Colonel's acting on my behalf in this matter, though I can't recall having discussed it with him. I would, however, have liked to ponder it a bit more in the public forum, with which he is well acquainted, before we all found ourselves and Baker vs. Carr

Launching Ceremonies Sunday For Carmel Junior High School

The launching of a ship and the dedication of an educational institution are not similar. A ship is never under way until it is launched, but a school is seldom launched until it has been under way for some time.

True to this convention, the Carmel Junior High School, in operation since summer vacation, will be formally dedicated on Sunday, at 2:00 p.m.

While it is not on the program for anybody or anything to be launched with champagne, the traditional tribute of speeches, music, presentation of colors and tours of inspection are scheduled in observance of the occasion.

To what is expected to be a large audience of students, teachers, parents and interested citizens, the day will mark both a ceremonial and a practical point of departure. The handsome and somewhat unusual $1,500,000 plant represents a new refinement in the district's educational attitude, being the first junior high school in a system heretofor organized on a primary-secondary basis. Further, by reason of location and intended future use, it looks outward, towards Carmel Valley, away to the north, west, towards Carmel's burgeoning suburbs, but not towards the venerable and aging heart of the system, Carmel itself.

It is a school of the future, both in orientation and use. For accord- to plans, it will one day be a senior high school, and the present plant, at Ocean Avenue and Highway One, will become one of two junior high schools, the other being eventually situated up the valley.

The present enrollment of 560 seventh, eighth and ninth grade students is housed in fifteen striking modular-composed buildings remarkable for their architectural validity as well as their practical flexibility. Sixteen regular classrooms, ten special rooms for science, art music, homemaking, drama and lectures; a foreign language laboratory, an auditorium, gymnasium, library, student activity center and administrative offices make up the function of the complex.

The welcome will be delivered by Dr. Walter L. Klas, principal, the invocation by Father Roger Dieudonne, of Carmel Mission Basilica.

An Historic Moment

CARMEL SHUCKS OFF COBWEBS

A society progresses in a series of plateaus. The city council last night boosted Carmel well on its way to the third plateau in the generation of this society. They voted, in effect, to approve the annexation of a parcel of residential land to the city.

This towering landmark had the characteristic Carmel dimension for the whimsical: it consisted of two lots, two homes and seven people. But in significance it loomed with as much consequence as the arrival of the first white man and the intrusion of the tourist, for it buried under shovels-full of resolution and enterprise the melancholy corpse of narrow seclusion with which the city had lived for forty-six years while the world was evolving outside its enchanted realm.

The drama of this significant night evolved too precipitously. A sombre, apprehensive and deliberate Francis Whitaker moved almost at once to deny Stephen Grant's petition to annex. When not one of his fellow councilmen would second his motion, and Mayor Eban Whittlesey declared the motion lost for want of a second, the fate of Carmel for as far into the future as anyone could (or would care to) gaze had been cast in monumental metal.

The eventual motion of Council-Herbert B. Blanks to instruct city attorney John Morse to draft an ordinance approving the annexation was fraught with high and cermonial significance, but was nothing compared to the symbolism of the failure of Whitaker's motion not to entertain an annexation. This has been, in fact and in myth, the characteristic stance of Carmel for nearly half a century. And last night, to the accompaniment of resounding curtain calls, the fact and the myth were dissolved.

Arch-conservative Gunnar Norberg said, "We should welcome this annexation. If we don't, we'll strangle and the periphery will take a new and uncharacteristic tack."

Restrained, careful and objective Admiral C. W. Fisher said, "The past was emotional rather than factual. I support this move."

Peter Ferrante, devoted to Carmel and jealous of its traditions said, through petitioner Grant, "I'm with you, Steve. I tried in 1946, and failed." But Ferrante did not fail last night.

John Martin, prominent attorney, present on another matter, arose and spontaneously told the council: "I live slightly across the highway. I hope to become a part of the city. As soon as some territory reaches close enough, I'm going to work hard to become a part of the city."

The council listened to these and other remarks which not only buried the wraith of provincialism but memorialized its departure. When they finally moved to approve, however, they heeded with considerable earnestness, councilman James Buffington's positive opposition to future small annexation.

Last night, in order to dispel unfriendly ghosts, the council would have accepted anything, but what they distinctly wanted understood was that the expediency of

Yates On Board, New Chairman Is Newton

Robert Newton was elected last night by fellow members as president of the board of trustees of the Carmel Unified School District, succeeding Dr. Grant Fletcher, retired. Under his chairmanship, the board then appointed George Yates, former board member, to serve out Fletcher's unexpired term to the end of June, 1963.

The board looked at plans for remodelling a part of Sunset School for district administrative offices; prepared to call for bids on a sprinkler and fire alarm system for Sunset Auditorium.

DON'T DO AS I SAY, SAY AS I DO SAYS CITY COUNCIL

The city council last night upset the determination of the board of adjustments granting to the Studio Theater a use permit amendment respecting the separation by four hours of the serving of beer and the presentation of light drama.

The action, which said in effect that the approximate presentation of beer and legitimate theater was not nice, in reality implied that the idea was not of itself wrong, but that the present regulations were not competent to prevent a wrong application of the idea.

Recently, on the question of whether to protest to the state Alcoholic Beverage Control Board the issuance of a beer license, the council decided that it had no grounds for protest, and if drama and beer were separated by at least four hours it would continue to have none.

The board of adjustments, taking at face value the action of the council at that time, issued an amendment containing the four hour clause.

Last night, forgetting that the board had only acted in compliant accord with this opinion, the council decided that the board had done wrong in doing so, a decision which may create some consternation among board members, who

Sport Cars

BY ED LESLIE

Did you just pay many extra dollars for your "bucket seats" in your car? I notice that in England a prominent U. S. car manufacturer has just offered our English car-buying neighbors an "optional bench-type front seat" (at extra cost, of course).

I remember the old floor-located gearshift and its progress up to the column; replacement by auto-transmission controls; and then, startlingly enough, auto-transmission controls back on the floor, styled to look like a gearshift (at extra cost, of course), a genuine floor operated sportscar-type gearshift right there on the floor where it used to was! At extra cost, of course!

Aside from pride of ownership, one of the features of a sportscar is the huge built-in margin of saftey, and its ability to handle extreme stresses.

Did you know that many 150-mile an hour sports racing cars use front spindles, axles and steering controls from little 40 hp. production sports cars that cost under $2,000? Racing car constructors know the quality of material and close tolerances that go into design and manufacture of any good sports cars. The little Triumph Herald supplies most of Lotus front end parts, the VW transmission is mass produced to take 40 hp., and yet it arranges the special gears to handle the formula Jr. racers with outputs exceeding 100 hp. and maximum cornering loads.

Stock Fiat 600 transmissions do the same thing, as do sturdy Renault gearboxes. The rack and pinion of the Morris 1000, designed years ago, still steers cars with 400 hp. Chevy V8s and 2.7 litre Coventry Climax engines. Yes, there is a margin of safety in the sports car you buy.

Where the old American six cylinder engine could turn 3500 rpm all day long and most V8s are rated at about 4400 revolutions per minute, the Cosworth English Ford engine uses absolutely stock 105E English Ford Anglia $60 crankshafts to put out their power at sustained 8,000 rpm!

On my Lotus Formula Jr. we still find stock rocker arms, push rods, cam followers, etc. The camshafts that lift 365 thousandths at 8,000 rpm are ground from stock cams taken right from dealers' stocks supplies, except in Grand Prix engines like Climax and BRM.

I recently disassembled a damaged Lotus 15, a race car with 170 hp. in a 1100 lb. space frame, which had hit 140 mph on road race courses, and had won at Laguna Seca three years ago. I was amazed at the standard parts that were used, unaltered, and with no lack of dependability. The entire 170 hp. was driven through an MGA gearbox and transmitted to the wheels by a differential from a Morris or Austin!

The brakes for your sports car are now often disc type at front and drums at the rear, and they provide retardation far in excess of any requirements you could impose on them.

The rallies and trails across Australia and Africa shock test the cars, and the suspension members are not allowed to brake under impact with rocks and ditches at high speeds.

The Vandervell lead-indium bearings that most engines use on their crankshafts are able to stand loads of roughly double the revolutions you will demand in highway use. There are often sway bars, shock absorbers, rebound straps and safety features that you will never realize are there; but they are.

Vinyl lasts as long as most leather, and yet leather seating is most often used in foam-padded bucket seats — which are anchored to the floor to stay in the car whether you run over a milk carton or a balloon!

Most amazing of all, to me, is the safety margin generally provided in the standard equipment tire. As you know, there is always a margin allowed when a manufacturer rates his tires' ability to carry weight; beyond this, consider that the average 2,000 lb. sports car has four tube-type 5:90 x 15 apiece. (28 lbs. inflation)

The 4,000 lb. Big Three auto has 7.50 x 14 tubeless tires which are rated at approximately 1185 lbs. each at 28 psi. (After you think about that realize how brave you were when you took the wife and four children and all that camping gear down the coast Highway at 50 mph. and never considered a blowout!)

There are often even better grades of tires included at standard price on the more expensive sports cars. Tires good to 135 mph and with far superior road holding ability are also available.

GREETINGS

Amigos!

I hope you are keeping Carmel under control. I have done my best here for four days but no one wants set backs or off-street parking—nothing but tourists is their desire and they don't care how much us turistas litter the landscape with our cars and ourselves. The ocean is so warm—and below the Tropic of Cancer the air is mucho balmy.

DAM SHAME

January 6, 1963

Dear Sir:

A public meeting on the engineer's report for the $16,695,000 proposed San Antonio Dam Project is scheduled by the Board of Supervisors for 14 January, 1963, at 11 a.m. The engineering report is available to be studied in the County Courthouse.

This project proposes to build a 350,000 acre foot dam, the same size as the Nacimiento Dam, on a river that has 1/3 less flow than the Nacimiento.

How long will it be before this dam could be filled so that any water would be released for irrigation? What will the cost per acre foot be to the taxpayers? The report doesn't even say what the cost will be to pay off the bonded indebtedness. Perhaps it has gone up again. The last we heard it was 45c per $100 assessed valuation. How much interest will have to be paid on that $16,695,000?

No provision has been made to distribute the water to the areas that need it. Additional water conservation can be attained through the building of irrigation canals, diversion structures, terminal reservoirs, etc., as put forth in the District report on Conservation studies dated April 1, 1961. Only then can the water be used by the areas in Moss Landing, Castroville, Gonzales, Soledad, etc., which do not now receive water from the Nacimiento. These areas will not be served by the waters of the San Antonio Dam as proposed in this present project, because no such structures are provided for in this bond issue.

Perhaps you have a plan in mind. Find out about this project—what you are being asked to support — express your ideas. If we need water, let's get it the cheapest way possible, for the benefit of the most people.

We urge everyone to attend this hearing on the San Antonio Dam Project, on Monday, 14 January, at 11 a.m.

Virginia Culbert, Secretary
San Antonio Land Owners' Association

arraigned before the learned judges.

That is no time to talk it over. That is time to get yourself a good lawyer. Or a mouthful of Latin phrases like nolo contendere or ipse dixit.

Or a bookful of handy, gift-wrapped amendments to an assortment of constitutions. For instance, the Lions Club has a dandy constitution. And so does Rotary.

At least, if you have these, you're not going in with nothing more than untaxed Indians, Tennessee congressmen (a notoriously devious lot) and the Colonel's assurance that we're all in this thing together.

But, if I can sneak out into the corridor, which I fully intend to do while the charges are being read, I'm going to do a little outloud thinking on this matter.

They may ding me for a misdemeanor, or I may have to fight a lese majesty rap. But at least I will understand why the Colonel and I are mad at the people in San Ardo.

(Read our Big Indian issue next week for the thrilling corridor-think episode.)

Speaking Of Killers

Some observers are alarmed by two appearances of a killer whale in Stillwater Cove during the past week. He has swung a wide arc through the cove, lunged at the sea lion community, then set out on a purposeful tour along the Carmel beach, where a tasty array of surfboarders, fanny-dippers, and skin divers have been on display.

The horrified observers each time telephoned the alarm to the Coast Guard, but nothing ever happened. Nothing to the Coast Guard, nothing to the whale, nothing to the bathers.

The Coast Guard says that nothing ever happens because "their hands are tied." The killer is the concern of the state Department of Fish and Game. "We'll take them out there if they want us to, or shoot it for them, or anything else. But our hands are tied".

Fish and Game's hands are not tied, however, but they simply don't think there is anything to be alarmed about. Killer whales relish sea lions and, when in a pack, the grey whales now migrating along the coast. But they have no record of an appetite for humans. So far.

"They are nonchalant feeders," says Julius Phillips of the Hopkins Marine Laboratory. "They don't even try very hard to get a sea lion; it's just if one happens to be there — well, they eat it."

Phillips is pretty well convinced that there is no danger, or not much, or perhaps not as much as from the great white shark. But he would not say so absolutely. All he would say was, if you see the fin coming, get out. As an afterthought, he added: "If you don't see a fin, it's a great white shark. And they are dangerous."

There is an interesting showing of cartoonists' work in the Beardsley Room in the Carmel Art Association galleries — Dedini, Murray, Barnes, Hatlo, O'Malley, O'Neal, Wiseman and a man by the name of Arriola.

In the display case at the entrance to the galleries is an enchanting drawing of Gordo, done by the man named Arriola. Beneath it are three signs. One has an arrow pointing to the other two, and bears the legend, "See other signs." One of the other signs says,

"Drawing By Gus Arriola."

The last sign, beneath it says, "Lettering by Ann Hoffman."

Ruinous Attrition

Last Friday, Anne Weeks, who works in Enos Fouratt's real estate office, found the left front door of her automobile woefully crumpled. A car had backed into it.

Sincere apologies were made, and the backee said, "I shall report this at once to my insurance agent, Enos Fouratt. He will take care of everything." "You needn't bother," responded Anne. "I work for him; let me."

Same Song, Second Verse. Monday afternoon, Virginia Brooks, who works in Enos Fouratt's real estate office, found the left front door of her automobile woefully crumpled. A car had backed into it. "We're out of commission," wailed Virginia. "No, wait; there's still Enos' car."

We're waiting.

The accident to Virginia Brooks' car occurred at Lincoln and Ocean Avenue. A car parked on Lincoln in front of the library slipped its brakes, and rolled in a stately arc across the swarming Ocean Avenue traffic, following a deadly trajectory that zeroed in on the Brooks car parked on the southeast corner.

It is the second time in about a week that a car parked in this approximate location has rolled away. Roll-aways, peculiarly enough, are infrequent occurrences in Carmel, though with our unusually inclined streets, they could be a regular feature of our daily accident toll, distinguished by the fender-banging and head-knocking intersection collision. Have you had yours today?

ORGANIZATIONS

Birds

The Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society will start the year with many activities. This conservation organization has a membership of over 200 local persons. Captain Elgin Hurlbert, president, conducts monthly meetings on the second Friday of each month. Anyone interested may attend meetings, field trips and other activities, and may call Miss Joy DeCamp, MA 4-8096 for additional information.

The regular monthly meeting will be held in the music room of Carmel High School tomorrow, at 8 p.m. Judson Vandevere, program chairman, has announced that Vern Yadon, curator of the Pacific Grove Museum will talk on Conservation Needs Of The Monterey Peninsula, and will illustrate his talk with colored slides.

The monthly meeting of the Bird-A-Month section will be held at the home of Miss Waller and Mrs. Brislawn on the northwest corner of Sixteenth and Camino Real, Carmel, on Wednesday, 16 January, at 10 a.m. Rare and unusual birds of the winter months will be discussed.

On Saturday, 19 January, the Paraiso Springs area west of Soledad will be explored in a field trip. Those interested in joining the trip are asked to follow the River Road south from the Salinas-Monterey Highway, and to meet at the junction of the Paraiso Springs Road and the Arroyo Seco Road at 9 a.m.

MPVS

Tomorrow will see the opening of a new year for Monterey Peninsula Volunteer Services. The meeting will begin at 10 a.m. at the USO building in Monterey. Coffee will be served by the Hospitality Chairman, Mrs. Franklin B. Mead. When Mrs. W. Lincoln Noelle strikes her gavel at 11 o'clock, the business for the year of 1963 will start.

Since the aim of the organization is to help the community in charitable and cultural projects it is necessary to acquire funds for these ends. It has been the policy of M P V S to put on one or more big fund-raising projects each year. These are in addition to their main fund-raising project which is the Thrift Shop. This is in charge of Mrs. J. B. Farrior and is located at 785 Broadway in Seaside. It is open every day except Saturday and Sunday from 12 noon until 4 p.m. All the work done in the shop or on the other projects is entirely volunteer and able workers are always welcome.

The Littlebits Chapter of the Children's Home Society will hold a coffee hour Wednesday at 10 a.m. at the home of Mrs. Frederick Stanley, Sixteenth and Camino Real, chapter president Mrs. John Rennels has announced.

Associate members and their guests are invited to attend.

Dimes Chairman

Andy Church, county campaign director, has appointed James Kelsey, proprietor of the Rinky Dink on Sixth Street, Carmel chairman for the March of Dimes.

"This 25th anniversary March of Dimes should be the most successful in years," Kelsey says. "Our campaign theme this year is 'give for the life of a child,' and we are asking residents of Carmel to do just that."

BUSINESS

Casing The Joint?

A suave, pleasant, dark-haired man came to town last week, apparently up to no good, but certainly up to some kind of hanky-panky. By representing himself as a federal tax agent he was able to get a maid at the Oak Tree Lodge to allow him to examine the receipt books. He tried the tax man approach at Carmel Sands as well. Then, apparently, he altered his disguise to that of a representative of the Gypsum Company and went calling on Snug Harbor and one or two others, but still seeking access to receipt books.

He may be some kind of a nut, or an avid reader of correspondence courses on how to be a detective, or more ominously, a person trying to case a few good possibilities for the Crosby Tournament, always a rich proposition for thugs of assorted ambitions.

Distressed Wharf

The Wharf Theatre is going dark for the balance of the winter season.

The corporation, Number Eleven Company, Inc., has been brought to its knees by mounting debts, dwindling resources and a barren box office. Thomas D. Brock, president, in a letter dated 3 January, advised creditors of the doleful decision to suspend further performances until June.

"It is simply a fact that the theatre can be only a summer operation, and cannot perform successfully in the winter." Why? Tourists.

The Lively Arts

Born Yesterday At Circle Tomorrow

The famous post-war American comedy, Born Yesterday, opens tomorrow night at the Golden Bough Circle Theatre.

Garson Kanin's story of the dumb blonde who prevents a multi-millionaire junk dealer from buying off the United States Senate has become almost a legend since its debut with Judy Holliday in 1945. It has been seen on Broadway, in the films, and in London, where it was produced by Sir Laurence Olivier.

The Circle Theatre production will star Myrtlerose Craig, Sam Karas and Bill Houle as, respectively, ex-chorus girl Billie Dawn, big-time thug Harry Brock, and New Republic reporter Paul Verrall, the Pygmalion who transforms Billie into a defender of democracy.

Paul Ransom will be seen as Ed Devery, one-time assistant attorney general who has become a satrap to Brock's political ambitions. George Smith plays a corruptible U. S. Senator, and Katheryn Carlson will portray the senator's wife. Ronn Mullen, last seen as David Larrabee in Sabrina Fair, plays a dispirited yeoman in the Brock entourage.

Newcomer Shirley Tepper makes a noteworthy debut as a pert hotel maid. Old favorite Derek Lawford plays a stuffy hotel manager. George Thomson, Gisella Lieb and Reed Putman portray various members of the staff in what is described as the most lavish hostelry in Washington, D. C.

The task of recreating this ultra-luxurious setting on the Circle stage has fallen to designer Barbara Tripp, who performed similar duties for recent productions of The Pleasure Of His Company, Critic's Choice and Sabrina Fair.

Opening night of Born Yesterday will be a benefit for the Soroptomists of the Monterey Peninsula. Thereafter it will play on Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings through 24 February.

Where There's Life

By Andre Hope

Still in a Happy New Year mood. Over the holidays re-encountered (that's a word?) a very dear, old friend of mine from radio days in Hollywood: Charles Alexander, most talented writer, who is now living in Carmel with his charming wife and doing all manner of interesting things at Stanford Research Institute. There's something so nice about having old friends as new neighbors. . .

Went to a lovely 12th Night Party at the home of pretty Kitty Bayless and husband, Hugh. She had one of the nicest types of buffet: chilled wine, a huge tureen of soup with cheesed breads, Spanish paella (casserole type) — a mixture of saffron rice, chorizo sausage, shrimps, clams, chicken, peas, pimiento and — — — oooh, boyyyyy! The salad was a combination of greens, onion rings and citrus with a wonderful dressing. Dessert? Good cakes and coffee. Encore? A gathering around the piano with guitar, harmonica and those in excellent voice. A nice way to kiss the holidays good-bye under the fading mistletoe. . .

This all leads to discussing the happy idea of soup-based buffets. I have a few I endorse heartily, particularly for these winter months when a steaming bowl just naturally goes with a blazing fire. In the kosher manner there can be chicken broth with matzo balls, hot pastrami sandwiches, pickled vegetables, cheese-cake for dessert. Matzo balls? A delight! I know both Kip's Market and Safeway in the Carmel Valley provide matzo meal. Recipe on the package. They also have fine frozen cheese-cakes, or there are always the magnificent ones (who was going to count calories in '63?) fresh at the Carmel Bakery. . .

For those who prefer a Latin beat (have you learned the Bossa Nova yet? Have you heard of it yet?) there is chili soup with the little frozen tacos or with tortillas, a salad of avocado and orange or grapefruit slices, and coffee ice cream with a drizzle of Kahlua liqueur. A really wild dessert might also be Monterey Jack cheese with guava jelly; s'true! Chili soup? Equal amounts of canned chili beans in gravy and canned chili con carne. Beat the beans or mix in blender with half the amount of bouillon. Add to chili con carne with a small can of minced olives, thin with water as necessary. Heat to bubbling. Speaking of heat, to make a tortilla happy, sprinkle each one with water, pile in pie tin or cake pan and put in moderate oven until steaming; this gives them the tender touch. . .

Now about the Russian situation: borscht, beef strogonoff, chilled compote of strawberries, raspberries and peaches, fresh, canned or frozen. . . Might I add, if my recipes are vague or entirely absent or goofing off for you, I'd like to have you drop me a note care of this paper and I will rectify. As a matter of fact, if I can help you with party or menu plans in any way — feel free. Unlike the gal who calls herself the "Fat Venus," I like to think of myself as the "Calorie Countess".

HOW CUM?

Beer and comedy at the Studio Theater has been clobbered by the city council. Then, how curious is the serving of champagne and Born Yesterday at another theater tomorrow night. Or is this a charitable oversight?

MUSIC

French Concert

Joan Goodwin, pianist, and Karen Steinke, mezzo-soprano, will be presented in a concert of French music on Friday 25 January at 8:30 p.m. in the music hall of Monterey Peninsula College. The Alliance Francaise of the Monterey Peninsula is sponsoring the program.

Joan Goodwin received her B. A. from San Jose State College and her Master's degree from the University of Wisconsin. Her teachers have been William Erlendson, Gunnar Johansen, Egon Petri and Maro Ajemian. She has been soloist with the San Jose Symphony and with the San Jose State College Symphony, and in February will be soloist with the Santa Cruz Symphony.

She has won several awards, among them the Bibbins Scholarship and awards offered by the collegiate and alumnae chapters of Mu Phi Epsilon, honorary music sorority. She attended the University of Wisconsin as recipient of a Knapp Fellowship for graduate study, and the following year was awarded a teaching fellowship.

Karen Steinke attended the University of Southern California, and is a graduate in music from the University of Arizona in Tucson. In 1961 and 1962 she was winner of the San Francisco auditions of the Metropolitan Opera. In 1962 she was also winner of the Monterey County Symphony's Regional auditions, and was soloist in their spring concert.

She has performed locally many times at Monterey Peninsula College, the Robert Louis Stevenson and the Santa Catalina Schools, as well as taking part in opera productions. She was in The Marriage Proposal, original opera by William Purdy, produced at MPC in the spring of 1962; in 1961 she sang the role of Lady Thiang in The King And I at the Wharf Theatre. This winter she took the part of Madame Flora in The Medium at the Tantamount Theatre.

Miss Steinke will be accompanied by William F. Purdy, local composer and pianist, who is also music critic of the Monterey Peninsula Herald.

The evening's program will include selections from the works of Ravel, Satie, Faure, Poulenc, Massenet, Debussy, Bizet, Berlioz, Liszt, and Bernstein.

The concert will be for the benefit of the French scholarship fund of the Alliance. Tickets at $1.50, general admission, and 75 cents for members, students and the armed forces, may be obtained at Abinante's, Monterey, or the Browse-Around Music Store in Carmel; or by telephoning one of the following committee members: Mrs. Henry Baron, FR 2-5546; Mrs. George Podbereski, FR 5-0647; or Mr. William Cano, MA 4-4653.

Rare Old Music

The Renaissance - Baroque Ensemble, a chamber music group of instruments and voices, will perform at Monterey Peninsula College tomorrow evening. Under the direction of Stanford University faculty member George Houle, the ensemble recently gave a concert in Golden Gate Park's Hall of Flowers which drew raves from San Francisco critics.

Tomorrow's program at the college will include rare works by Claudin de Sermisy (circa 1490-1562), Cipriano de Rora (1516-1565), Thomas Tomkins (1572-1656), John Taverner (circa 1495-1545), Thomas Ford, Marin Marais (1656-1728), Andre Campra (1660-1744) and George Frederick Handel (1685-1759).

The Renaissance - Baroque Ensemble is composed of professional and amateur musicians who have been playing early music for several years, as well as of some graduate and former students from Stanford and the University of California.

It includes Nanty Brown, soprano; Beatrice Murphy, soprano; Richard Felciano, tenor; Houle, oboe and recorders; James Matheson, oboe; Jane Troy, treble viol; Bernard Schmidt, tenor viol and lyra viol; Haselle Miloradovitch, bass viol, and Erich Schwandt, harpsichord.

Some members of the group have performed with the Carmel Bach Festival in recent years.

The concert will take place in the MPC music hall on campus at 8:30. The public is invited by the MPC music department to attend without charge. No reservations will be necessary.

Band Concert

The Monterey Peninsula College Concert Band will present a concert Sunday, 13 January, at 8:30 p.m. in the music hall on campus.

Under the direction of Jerry Coker, the band will perform a program including Chorale and Alleluia by Howard Hanson, Berceuse and Finale from Stravinsky's Firebird Suite, Spiritual for Band by H. Owen Reed, Fanfare and Allegro by Clifton Williams, and short pieces by Brahms, Tchaikowsky, and Wagner.

Student band members include Cary Gota, Linda Roberts, Carol Beckett, Lois Patnude, Patricia Lovell and Carolinda Millazzo, clarinets; Kem Buffo and James Pickford, flutes; Reginald Sugano, Dean Townsend and Richard Baldwin, saxophones; William Atwood, Russell James Cole, George Dovolis, Leon Brown, Marilyn Davidson and Oliver Horsley, trumpets; Jack Stock, George Goodwin, Norman Disher and Kenneth Goodwin, trombones; Nancy Warner and Phillip Di Girolamo, baritones; Douglas Hogue and Herbert Powers, percussion; and Dean Kinney, string bass.

The public is invited to attend without charge. No reservations or tickets will be required.

PAINTING

One Artist Show

Elise deCelles Beaton has just returned to Carmel from Jackson, California, where a one-artist show of Mrs. Beaton's original water color paintings has been hung in the Amador County Museum. This is her second Jackson show, the first being in December, 1960.

The current show will last from 1 January to 31 March. There are 20 paintings on display, including landmarks of the Mother Lode country, Virginia City, Nevada, Monterey Bay, and old buildings in Bodie Ghost Town.

Mrs. Beaton has been artist in residence in Bodie Ghost Town, now a State Park, for seven years. She is also a member of the Carmel Art Association, Nevada Artists Association, and the Society of Western Artists.

Children's Art

Art classes for children age 10 to 12 will be held on Saturday mornings at Sunset School under the sponsorship of the Peninsula chapter of American Federation of Arts.

The series of 10 classes begin 12 January under the instruction of Alex Gonzales, and will include work in water color, poster paint, collage and papier-mache.

Information regarding enrollment may be obtained by calling AFA headquarters, MA 4-2918.

On Wednesday, the Monterey Peninsula Chapter of the American Federation of Arts will hold its yearly membership meeting in the Party Room at the Mission Ranch.

Dinner at 8 p.m. luau style, as a preview to the Beaux Arts Ball, will be followed by the general meeting at 9 p.m.

Cinema 6 Thriller

The Maltese Falcon, a film made in this country in the 1940s and starring Humphrey Bogart at his best, will be the next presentation of Cinema 6. This film began a reign of terror by that crew of grotesque figures, Peter Lorre, Sidney Greenstreet, and Bogart. John Huston also began his career as a director of this terse Dashiell Hammett novel of crime, suspense and Sam Spade.

The program, which will be screened at the Monterey Youth Center this Sunday at 8:00 p.m., also will include the short subject Skip The Maloo. This is a two-reeler starring Charlie Chase (remember?), that expert at self-depreciation, an average American, non-descript earnest do-gooder, endlessly in trouble.

HOW TO MAKE YOUR OWN SCOTCH

First pipe in a suitable supply of Scottish hill water, and add to this a goodly quantity of barley, allowing it to soak for 48 hours. Then strain off the water, and lay out the wet barley on a cool floor in a great heap. It will start to grow, and in doing so, will become hot.

So make a wooden spade, and every few hours turn it over, each time spreading it a little thinner on the floor to keep it cool. As barley grows 24 hours a day, you will have to set an alarm and get up regularly to carry out turning throughout the night.

This process takes only eleven days, and in your spare time you will have been able to construct a fire-place at the foot of a small brick tower which should have a wire gauze floor half-way up and a wooden imitation of a Chinese pagoda at the top with a hole in the roof.

KIPPERING

Take your eleven-day-old barley, which by this time will have grown a little shoot and a root, and spread it out carefully on the wire floor. What you have made is called malt. In the fire-place you must now build a huge fire of peat. This is a type of decomposed Scottish vegetation which is dug out of a bog the previous Spring, and carefully dried in what sunshine the following Scottish summer has to offer. This fuel is important as the peat smoke, which has a most nostalgic and haunting aroma, imparts some of this to the drying malt, and ultimately to the finished whisky, giving it flavour and character in much the same way as the smoke of wood chips gives us the delectable and appetising flavour of well-cured bacon or kippered herrings.

Every three hours dig over the drying malt, as otherwise it will burn on the lower side.

Unfortunately, as the fire cannot be put out, you will find the working conditions far from agreeable, and you will also notice that the smoke is not particularly nostalgic, but extremely haunting, and it will most probably haunt your clothes for the next four or five days.

THE WASH

After kippering the malt and yourself, the fire can be allowed to go out, and the malt will be found to be dry and hard. Remove the little root and shoot from each grain one by one, and give them to the birds. Then grind up the grains and add them to hot water, stirring vigorously.

Drain off the liquid, allowing it to cool in a separate vessel and add some yeast (you can get this from the baker). Bubbles will soon appear and the sugar in the malt you have made will gradually be eaten by the yeast and turned into weak alcohol. Leave this to go on for three days, but do not taste it as it is horrible, and is called Wash.

Some weeks before you should have sent an onion to your plumber and asked him to copy it in copper, and make it big enough to hold this Wash. Now you must fill it up and connect up the end of the onion with a corkscrew-shaped pipe which should be kept immersed in running water. Put a Primus stove underneath and wait for the drips at the end of the pipe. When these stop, empty out the Still and clean it carefully, putting the product of the last distillation back in again. You then have to do the same thing all over again.

WHISKY?

You won't recognise what you have made, but if you are in Scotland, and if you put it in an oak cask and keep it for three years, then you are legally allowed to call it Scotch Whisky. However, as you have made it outside the law, you will not be allowed to call it anything, and, in fact, you had better keep very quiet about it. If you live elsewhere, you will just have made whisky. It may be good, or it may be bad, for no one knows what the product of a new distillery will be like until it has been made, matured, and tasted, and the different shapes of Stills make different kinds of whisky.

Unfortunately, if you want to make something like the great brands of Scotch, you must also produce a Scotch Grain Whisky to blend with your malt whisky, and, of course, keep all your whiskies very much longer than the minimum legal three years. Grain whisky is a type of whisky which has none of the strong robust character of the malt whiskies. It is rather thin in body and has only a very little flavour, but it is mild and flowery to the nose. It is made largely by magic in large distilleries, and simply does not work on a small scale. Your wife would undoubtedly object if you converted your whole house into a distillery, so this problem can be dismissed from your mind.

The foregoing appeared in a perfectly delightful pamphlet published by Teacher's Scotch Whisky. It was written by the great-grandson of the founder of the firm.

HOW TO MAKE YOUR OWN SCOTCH

First pipe in a suitable supply of Scottish hill water, and add to this a goodly quantity of barley, allowing it to soak for 48 hours. Then strain off the water, and lay out the wet barley on a cool floor in a great heap. It will start to grow, and in doing so, will become hot.

So make a wooden spade, and every few hours turn it over, each time spreading it a little thinner on the floor to keep it cool. As barley grows 24 hours a day, you will have to set an alarm and get up regularly to carry out turning throughout the night.

This process takes only eleven days, and in your spare time you will have been able to construct a fire-place at the foot of a small brick tower which should have a wire gauze floor half-way up and a wooden imitation of a Chinese pagoda at the top with a hole in the roof.

KIPPERING

Take your eleven-day-old barley, which by this time will have grown a little shoot and a root, and spread it out carefully on the wire floor. What you have made is called malt. In the fire-place you must now build a huge fire of peat. This is a type of decomposed Scottish vegetation which is dug out of a bog the previous Spring, and carefully dried in what sunshine the following Scottish summer has to offer. This fuel is important as the peat smoke, which has a most nostalgic and haunting aroma, imparts some of this to the drying malt, and ultimately to the finished whisky, giving it flavour and character in much the same way as the smoke of wood chips gives us the delectable and appetising flavour of well-cured bacon or kippered herrings.

Every three hours dig over the drying malt, as otherwise it will burn on the lower side.

Unfortunately, as the fire cannot be put out, you will find the working conditions far from agreeable, and you will also notice that the smoke is not particularly nostalgic, but extremely haunting, and it will most probably haunt your clothes for the next four or five days.

THE WASH

After kippering the malt and yourself, the fire can be allowed to go out, and the malt will be found to be dry and hard. Remove the little root and shoot from each grain one by one, and give them to the birds. Then grind up the grains and add them to hot water, stirring vigorously.

Drain off the liquid, allowing it to cool in a separate vessel and add some yeast (you can get this from the baker). Bubbles will soon appear and the sugar in the malt you have made will gradually be eaten by the yeast and turned into weak alcohol. Leave this to go on for three days, but do not taste it as it is horrible, and is called Wash.

Some weeks before you should have sent an onion to your plumber and asked him to copy it in copper, and make it big enough to hold this Wash. Now you must fill it up and connect up the end of the onion with a corkscrew-shaped pipe which should be kept immersed in running water. Put a Primus stove underneath and wait for the drips at the end of the pipe. When these stop, empty out the Still and clean it carefully, putting the product of the last distillation back in again. You then have to do the same thing all over again.

WHISKY?

You won't recognise what you have made, but if you are in Scotland, and if you put it in an oak cask and keep it for three years, then you are legally allowed to call it Scotch Whisky. However, as you have made it outside the law, you will not be allowed to call it anything, and, in fact, you had better keep very quiet about it. If you live elsewhere, you will just have made whisky. It may be good, or it may be bad, for no one knows what the product of a new distillery will be like until it has been made, matured, and tasted, and the different shapes of Stills make different kinds of whisky.

Unfortunately, if you want to make something like the great brands of Scotch, you must also produce a Scotch Grain Whisky to blend with your malt whisky; and, of course, keep all your whiskies very much longer than the minimum legal three years. Grain whisky is a type of whisky which has none of the strong robust character of the malt whiskies. It is rather thin in body and has only a very little flavour, but it is mild and flowery to the nose. It is made largely by magic in large distilleries, and simply does not work on a small scale. Your wife would undoubtedly object if you converted your whole house into a distillery, so this problem can be dismissed from your mind.

The foregoing appeared in a perfectly delightful pamphlet published by Teacher's Scotch Whisky. It was written by the great-grandson of the founder of the firm.

Stock Market Analysis

By John D. Gates

The term "Blue Chips Stocks" is not a vague and indeterminable classification. While there is no exclusive list of stocks that fall in that category, it is possible to be quite specific about whether or not a particular stock qualifies for that description.

Some of the investment advisory services provide a rating for most of the actively traded stocks. The rating will range from Excellent, down through Average, to Lowest. Standard and Poor's, which is one of the most prominent services, uses a designation ranging from A plus to C. In the "A" category, there are three divisions. A plus is Excellent; A is Good; and A minus is Above Average. The "B" classification starts with B plus which is Average.

With these designations to refer to, an investor can restrict his purchases to a certain quality of stock, and many experienced investors do just that. When offered a particular security, they ask how it is rated. It is the feeling of some that when they go below A minus or B plus they are getting into a speculative range where they do not belong.

The rating services have very precise mathematical formulas for determining their ratings. They are based primarily on the earnings and dividend records of the companies over a designated period of time. The important factors are growth and stability, that is, the consistency of improvement in these two areas of dividends and earnings. This information necessarily is historical and cannot project the future progress of the company rated. However, the ratings are kept up to date so that they reflect as currently as possible the prevailing business fortunes of each firm.

One conspicuous example of this is the rating of United States Steel. A considerable amount of publicity has been given to its efforts to raise prices in the past year in order to maintain its profit margins. Failing to do so, it was obliged to reduce its annual dividend to stockholders from $3.00 to $2.00 per share annually. This reduction in the dividend stands as a black mark against its record as an investment grade stock, and its rating by Standard and Poor's was dropped from "A" down to "B plus", or from Good to Average.

Many stocks, notably the insurance and bank stocks, do not carry a rating by this advisory service, but that is not an indication of low quality; in fact, the quality of these financial institutions generally is exceptionally high.

If you are not familiar with the ratings of any securities that you hold, it is a simple matter for a broker to look them up. You may feel more secure having only those issues that have earned their ratings as high grade, or investment quality, stocks.

Christmas Business Reports Are Good

Business in Carmel during the course of the past year has been erratic, weak in spots, but ending at a generally high level of return. Certain businesses, however, are feeling effects more competitive than seasonal, particularly local groceries.

Craig Smith, at Kip's, reported "business here was not much better than usual in relation to last year. The mood of people seemed to be somewhat different. They weren't as eager to buy, although during the week between Christmas and New Year's it seemed like old times."

Frank Putnam said that business was the greatest in October and November that Putnam & Raggett had ever experienced, and December promised to prove out equally well. "People were buying fewer of the less expensive items. They seemed to be spending more and selecting more, preferring the better quality of merchandise."

Frank Hefling, at the Carmel Wine Shop, noted no lessening in a will to be convivial. He felt, however, that the four-day weekends, created by the Tuesday holidays, made it a little difficult to assess the buying mood.

Bill Godwin responded to a question about business in the Pine Inn dining room and bar by commenting that it was exceptionally good, and happily restrained. "The bar appeared to do somewhat better than usual." Again, it seemed that the four-day weekend was responsible.

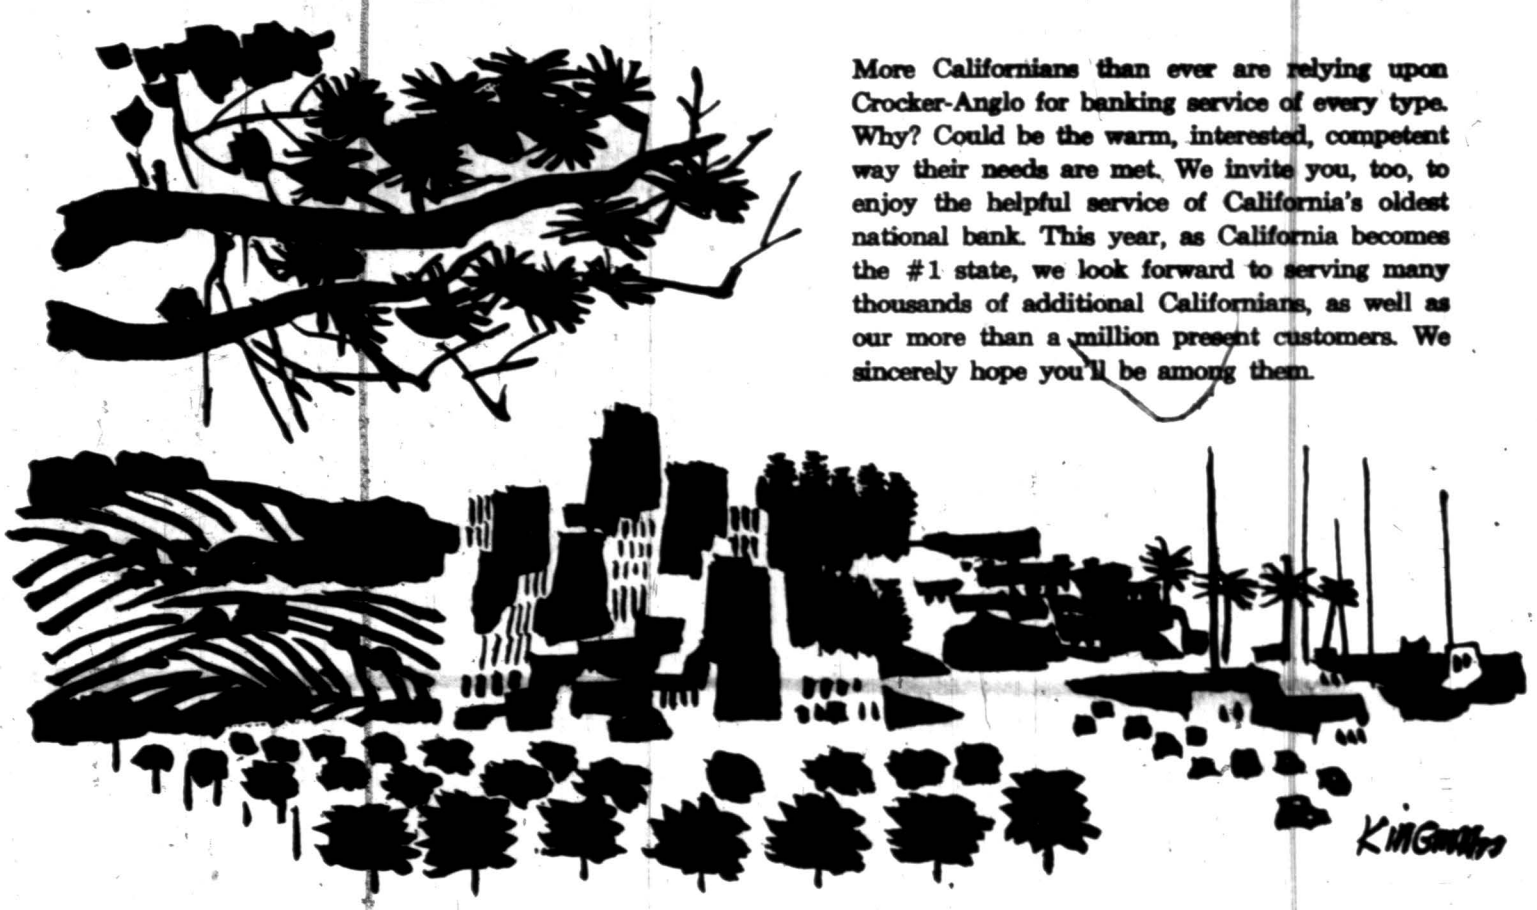
The four-day weekend, created by the holidays falling on consecutive Tuesdays, seemed to be generally responsible for a very active week between Christmas and New Year's. A notable number of tourists were on the streets and in the shops.

Lew Kramer remarked that "business was very satisfactory. We couldn't kick a bit. It was a nice gain. And, you know, we saw a lot of people we haven't seen in a long time."

Kramer's comment bore out what other merchants had implied: people from out of town were making long trips to come to Carmel, resorting to a strange gambit: vacation a bit and exchange gifts purchased for them here.

Gift exchanges, a tedious problem in most shops, is never a problem in art galleries, and Les Laky reported a thriving business in paintings as gifts. With no returns.

Most helpful bank in the #1 state



More Californians than ever are relying upon Crocker-Anglo for banking service of every type. Why? Could be the warm, interested, competent way their needs are met. We invite you, too, to enjoy the helpful service of California's oldest national bank. This year, as California becomes the #1 state, we look forward to serving many thousands of additional Californians, as well as our more than a million present customers. We sincerely hope you'll be among them.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERMON

Communion services will be held this Sunday at Carmel Christian Science church, and also at all Christian Science branch churches and societies throughout the world. The church tenets will be read, and the congregation will be invited to kneel in silent communion.

The Lesson-Sermon is on "Sacrament," and Bible readings will include this verse from Matthew 5: "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled."

From "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy this selection will also be read (p. 4): "The habitual struggle to be always good is unceasing prayer. Its motives are made manifest in the blessings they bring,—blessings which, even if not asknowledged in audible words, attest our worthiness to be partakers of Love."

Baha'i International Community

The Baha'i International Community, a non-governmental organization accredited to the United Nations, has appealed to the United Nations for help in stopping the persecution of the members of the Baha'i religion in Morocco.

A telegram has been sent to United Nations Secretary-General, U Thant, urging him to explore the recent Moroccan government's court case against 14 Baha'is. The case was concluded on 17 December and three of the defendants were sentenced to death, five others were sentenced to life imprisonment and another faces a term of 14 years' imprisonment at hard labor. The other defendants were acquitted.

The Baha'i International Community states that the charges leveled against the Baha'is at the 10 December trial in Nador, Morocco, were unfounded.

The Moroccan Government claims that the defendants were conspiring against the government by winning converts to the Baha'i World Faith among Moslems. The charges also included the accusation that the Baha'is are part of a political plot to overthrow the government, and that they attacked Islam. (Morocco is a Moslem church state).

"The Baha'i World Faith is a religion of peace. It shuns all things political," H. B. Kavelin, chairman of the Baha'i International Community states. "In fact one of our basic tenets is strict observance of the laws of all just governments. A Baha'i would be unfaithful to his religion if he worked against his country's interests or engaged in any subversive act." Mr. Kavelin adds: "Baha'is live in 258 countries, territories and dependencies throughout the world and strive to contribute to the welfare and peace of their countries."

"The Baha'is all over the world are stunned and grieved over this miscarriage of justice by the Moroccan court that tried and sentenced our coreligionists; that persons should be persecuted, worse still, put to death for practicing their religion is, in this day of enlightenment, a setback to mankind's quest for individual justice," Mr. Kavelin said.

He also said: "Baha'is everywhere appeal to King Hassan of Morocco, a just sovereign, to reverse the unjust court decision against our Baha'i brothers."

The Baha'i International Community bases its appeal to the United Nations on Articles II, IV and VIII of the Convention of Genocide, to which the Moroccan government is a signatory.

The Sur Coast

By Elizabeth Fuller Jones

Don McQueen has recently sold the Big Sur Garage, Big Sur, to Nick Pardue, former service manager for Monterey Bay Motors, Monterey. Mr. Pardue has taken a ten year lease on the garage building and will continue to maintain complete automotive service daily except Sunday. As in the past, a 24 hour emergency service will be available and contracts of service to members of the Automobile Association of America and National Automobile Club will be maintained. Mr. Pardue, his wife Cisha and two daughters, Paula and Wendy, have moved to Big Sur from their former home in Carmel.

This week Stephen Goetz, chief ranger, and staff of twenty men at the Big Sur Guard Station of the Los Padres National Forest, Big Sur, will begin their forestry season operation of clearing and repairing trails and camping areas within the remote areas of the National Forest. Some of the staff's detail will be construction work and trail building at a new National Forest camp site at Kirk Creek. Kirk Creek is on Highway One, about 25 miles south of Big Sur. Forty camping units, for overnight camping in tent or trailer, will soon be available. A new trail has been planned and will soon be constructed for easy access to the beach.

Alan Watts conducted a weekend seminar last Saturday and Sunday at Coast Art Gallery and Big Sur Hot Springs Lodge.

An exhibition of pottery, the work of Big Sur artist Loet Van der Veen, and sculpture by Gordon Newell, will be on display at the M. H. de Young Memorial Museum, San Francisco, from 21 January through 18 February, 1963.

A course in home nursing, a series of film programs, will be the moment would not become the custom of the future.

HISTORIC MOMENT

To the east they looked, to the extensive mouth of Carmel Valley; to the south, to Mission Fields, to the Mission Tract, to Carmel Point; to the north, to Carmel Woods; and to Carmel Hills.

And they said, in effect, "Be one of us, for this is our destiny." And while they said it, Francis Whitaker, and all he represented—the careful, aloof and self-sufficient Carmel of yesterday—listened and pondered and gazed from troubled depths upon the turbulent countenance of the future and a Carmel reaching eagerly outward to its maturity.

DON'T DO AS I SAY

have known in the past the meaning of contradiction, but have never had it so vividly illustrated.

Remarks by Councilman Frank Putnam indicated, however, that amendments to the present code provisions which would create enough controls to prevent dinner theaters from turning into night clubs might change the red light to green, in his opinion, and an eventual permit for a dinner theater might happily pass.

The city attorney, on instruction from the council, will ponder this objective.

LETTERS . . .

mel, the enclosed photograph will no doubt be of interest to you.

(Editor's comment: The writer loaned us an intriguing picture of lower Carmel and Carmel beach, taken in 1919. In a way it was prophetic: no trees. In 1919, however, the trees hadn't arrived; now, they can only go. The result is the same, but the promise is entirely different. I wish the picture were capable of reproduction, but it is not, I am sorry to say.)

For your information, I took it in July, 1919, from the south side of Ocean Avenue, or what there was of it, at about Carmelo or Camino Real.

At the time, a cold fog was rolling in, and the scene presented such a dismal appearance that I was indeed happy to return to San Francisco, or back to France where I had been for better than two years.

I have heard it said that, owing to the fact that most of the Carmel pines are of more or less the same age, they will die at about the same time; therefore, it behooves all concerned to plant pines to replace them.

The pines in existence today in the area are perhaps in the neighborhood of thirty-five years of age and may not have much time left if the thoughts of some are true.

Sincerely,
Malcolm W. Steel

presented in the Big Sur area beginning Friday, 11 January, at 10 a.m. in the Big Sur Grange Hall. The film series, prepared by the Red Cross and by civil defense officials, will be conducted by Mrs. Walter Doyle, volunteer nursing consultant for the Western Area, American National Red Cross.

The classes will be held once a week during January and are being organized by Mrs. Ken Cortright of Big Sur.

Film fare at the Big Sur Grange Hall this month includes:

12 January: Call Me Madam, starring Ethel Merman and Don O'Connor with music by Irving Berlin.

19 January: Wreck Of The Mary Deare, with Gary Cooper, Charlton Heston, Michael Redgrave.

26 January: My Brother Talks To Horses, with Butch Jenkins, Peter Lawford, Edward Arnold and Charles Ruggles.

Show time, 8:00 p.m. Admission: adults, 75 cents; children, 35 cents.

The first of Four Weekends At Big Sur Hot Springs will consist of a seminar led by Giles Healey dealing with the Mayan civilization and the frescoes of Bonampak.

In 1946 Mr. Healey discovered the Bonampak frescoes, a discovery which has often been called the greatest to date in the Mayan field, demonstrating as it does the high level of Mayan art and culture. Mr. Healey has made many expeditions to Central America and has long specialized in the study of the Mayan civilization.

The program for the week end is as follows: Friday, 18 January, 8:30 p.m.—Giles Healey's movie The Maya Through The Ages, followed by a question and answer period; Saturday (same time), an illustrated lecture by Mr. Healey; Sunday, 1:30 p.m.—a seminar to review the previous programs and explore further aspects of the Mayan civilization.

The registration fee is $10.00. Rooms will be available at the Hot Springs. Subsequent week end programs to be given during January and February will be announced in these columns.

SOUND-POST

BY JACK BENSON

The gifted soprano, Mary Costa, sang here last weekend. She was presented by the Monterey Peninsula Concert Association, and her womanly beauty and gracious stage presence enchanted the audience.

Almost the same may be said of Miss Costa's singing abilities, for she chose a program which, in part, accented her talents as a theatre preformer. The choice of encores gave further evidence of this fact. I am thinking particularly of such operatic excerpts as Ah Fors E Lui and Sempre Libera from Verdi's La Traviata. Un Bel Di from Madame Butterfly and Musetta's Waltz from La Boheme by Puccini, and Adele's Laughing Song from Die Fledermaus by Johann Strauss.

The difficult aria Martern Aller Arten which Mozart wrote for Constanza in his opera The Abduction From The Seraglio gave Mary Costa some trouble, however. To open a recital with this piece takes courage, and she did not receive much support from Gerhard Albersteim, her accompanist. It was a tug o' war throughout. They quickly achieved more effective collaboration in the songs by Mendelssohn which followed, and thereafter reach some inspired moments in their sensitive handling of Five Creek Songs by Maurice Ravel.

In the second half of the program Mary Costa's recital was marred somewhat by groups of songs by Dvorak and Norman Curtis which I feel were musically inferior. But she returned in grand operatic style to close the evening, adding a delightful little song about a child who didn't like to practice the piano. Mr. Albersteim's best talents came to the fore in this number.
